

A. What can you do at Uluru? – SPEAKING

Say what people can do at Uluru depending on their tastes. Give details and develop your ideas. Give your personal choice and explain.

If you are keen on (fond of / crazy about) nature, you can / should...because... To V, you need...

If you are not into physical activities, you can... Thanks to... you can...

If you'd rather do something cultural, you definitely should... It allows you to...

B. Planning a visit to Uluru. – INTERACTION

In pairs, get ready to role-play a phone conversation between a tourist and an AYERS ROCK RESORT staff member.

1. Tourists start the conversation and get ready to:

introduce themselves and explain they want to visit Uluru – ask about the activities available there – answer a question about their tastes – ask for precisions – make a decision (or not) and say thank you.

2. Staff members get ready to:

introduce themselves and offer to help – question tourists about their tastes – suggest activities and give precisions when asked – make sure they answered the tourists' questions and say good bye.

C. WRITING

1. You have just visited Uluru and write about it in your travel blog:

- tell people about two or three things you did – give details,
- clearly say what you have enjoyed the most and why,
- mention some other activities on offer,
- encourage people to come and visit the place.

2. You work in a travel agency and offer Uluru as a new destination. Write a paragraph to tell your customers about it and the activities available there.
